The figure reports incarceration separately for whites, Latinos, and African Americans and separately for three levels of education. The demographic erosion of Jim Crow through the migration of Southern African Americans to the North increased racial disparity in incarceration through the first half of the twentieth century. Clergy Knowledge worker Professor. Mass incarceration thus deepens disadvantage and forecloses mobility for them. Then came the stories about a surge in opiate addiction among white Americans, alongside shocking reports of rising mortality rates including by suicide among middle-aged whites. My Family and Other Animals. The duties of the middle-class husband and wife would be clearly delineated. A lifetime risk of imprisonment describes how many people are at risk of these diminished life chances. Workers could no longer continue to fuel further expansion, so a slowdown was inevitable.
