But, as Peter Berger a well-known sociologist, has argued, what distinguishes the sociologist from non-scientific researchers is that "[the] sociologist tries to see what is. Both approaches employ a scientific method as they make observations and gather data, propose hypotheses, and test or refine their hypotheses in the formulation of theories. The social act is a collective act involving the participation of two or more individuals. The human present opens toward the future. The organism goes out and determines what it is going to respond to, and organizes the world" Mind, Self and Society
